It has developed that there was a joker in the bidding on fiesta gamoling rights made Wednesday in Cludad Justez. Gambling promoters tried to make a dupe of the city, it is said, but were duped instead.

one contestant suddenly removed from the race, the followers of R. Crux, who finally purchased the rights, were left alone. It appeared all one way, with nobody to bid. But when bidding was begun at the $31,000 mark, the minimum, a dark horse entered the race.

It was Filipe Seijas, a prominent attorney of Juarez, who began pushing up the figure to be paid for the right to run games next month in front of the bull ring. To the great surprise of the bidders, the attorney pushed up the figure, leaving it at $44,900. It ought by Crux and his company for $45,000, much in excess of last year's figures. everybody knows that Mr. Seljas is not a gambling promoter, in fact, is known to be against gambling as an institution. And the attorney himself announces that he only bid to protect the city.

The crowd, dirty, whisky and sausage filled, spitting nauseating tobacco of the color of shiny cockroaches, with sneers, cried for vengeance and burned him at the stake alive.

"These are the acts of models of the higher civilization of a group of North Americans, sons of the grand republic, emulators of the moralist, Roosevelt the lion hunter.
